When editing images like those you might find in Google's high-res web images (Opens in a new window), you no longer have to strain your eyes trying to see what you're doing. The new Photoshop app's built-in tools for contrast, zoom and image magnification are now up to 10 times faster than in previous versions. In addition, you can now zoom in and out and scroll through your content in a browser window using your mouse or stylus. Furthermore, images can now be sent directly to the popular Files app for iOS. This new feature makes it simpler to share photos to your iPhone, iPad and other devices as well as share your shared and created photos with your family and friends via e-mail. Last but not least, Adobe Photoshop now supports videos in four different formats: MOV, MP4, HEVC and WebM. Import files in these formats and easily access them right from the timeline for fast editing. To make the new Photoshop app even more useful, Adobe has also introduced a slew of features that are available in the current version of the desktop software. These include a new, intelligent auto retouching tool that could remove minor blemishes and unwanted objects from images, as well as a new feature that could easily reduce the size of images for e-mailing. Adobe presents dozens of new features in Photoshop 20.2. A number of the new features are supported in both desktop and mobile versions of the software. In addition to the features mentioned earlier, Photoshop 20.2 also includes new features such as stroke masking for creating and changing an object's shape, a simplified masking tool, a new Content Aware Fill for finding duplicate items in an image and better editing for video effects.

For the first time, the GPU enables the core features of Photoshop to use hardware accelerated graphics processing (GPU). This significantly increases the speed of Photoshop, by up to 2.5 times if you combine all features! This feature also enables fast-paced sequencer workflows and new rich creative workflows based on CG composition. GPUs enable real-time high dynamic range effects, the use of post-processor plug-ins, and graphic on-the-fly editing in real time. This is announced for full deployment and release in early 2017. In a mostly unrelated announcement, Adobe also said that it will release a new family of Adobe Suites - Photoshop, Lightroom, Premiere, etc. - later this year, which will more closely integrate the company's widely used cross-product products. Seven Adobe Suite in one whole package is apparently the next computing standard we should expect in the near future. The launch of the new line of Creative Suite and family products from Adobe coincides with a resurgent emphasis on creativity across the company. The launch announcement was accompanied by a new feature portrayed as bringing creative agency with a new, more vibrant look to Photoshop and other products. "Simplicity is strength. Complexity is chaos. Creativity across our products is what enables us to solve problems, regardless of their size, in an innovative way," said Anupam Ray, senior product manager for Adobe Photoshop. There's a number of new features coming to today's Photoshop, including new features for vectors, and the ability to handle your huge files with ease. In addition, with the release of Photoshop CC 2020, there are some great new features such as the image-composition tools and the ability to work on large images via the Multiframe feature.
